"COUNTESS OF TUBS" Amateur Performance at Bellevue-Stratford Last Night Great Success.

Quite the most girly-girly performance of the year and altogether charming was the "Countess of Tubs," the amateur musical comedy presented last night in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford for charity. And although the inclement weather undoubtedly kept a number of persons at home, the boxes and lower floor were comfortably filled with an audience which was most appreciative of the efforts of the entertainers. Much credit is due to Charles Leon Downing, who was responsible for the production and staging of the entire affair, for the two acts were given with a smoothness and finish which was truly quite admirable.

The plot dealt with the adventures in the great world of a former blanchisseuse de fin and her family, the title role being taken by Miss Edwina Malpass.

Thomas Cathcart as Karl Van Damm and later as negro waiter received much applause, as also did Alexander Balfour with his song, "It's Too High." In the first act a dance by Miss Frances McCann, Miss Irene Thomas and Henry Nibhtingale, as messenger boys, created much amusement.

Miss Malpass, with a chorus composed of children from the Northern Home for Friendless Children (for which the benefit was given), received round after round of applause. The second act opened with a cabaret scene, in which the fox trot and the lulu fava were danced.

Miss Marie Starr, a debutante of the season, was simply delightful in a solo dance, and flattered about the stage with wonderful grace. Her costume was most unique, representing a fuchsia. The bodies of the gown was of deep purple velvet, with points of the velvet extending down onto the skirt, which was of pale pink tulle with many small ruffles like the petals of a flower.

Miss Helen Sanders, with Norris E. Henderson, Jr., as a dancing partner, appeared in a delightful duo dance, the Pavlova gavotte. Miss Sanders' costume was of the picturesque period of 1812. Miss Miriam Blaker also interpreted several dances. Most unusual was the chorus of the song, "The Things We Eat At Night," presenting animated lobster salads, chickens, champagne bottles, ice cream cones, bouillon cups and other delicious but indigestible edibles. "Les Bismarcks du Regiment" brought down the house. In this chorus the girls were garbed in costumes similar to those worn in one of the choruses of a musical revue recently playing in this city, consisting of a combination of pale pink and blue satin, with bloomers. The men were Tommy Atkinses in brilliant scarlet uniforms.

The dance of artists and models was also cleverly conceived. The girls were most attractive in black satin costumes, with knee breeches and three-cornered hats of black satin. The men were clad in artist's blouse and cap. Altogether, the evening was a great success, for after the lowering of the curtain and the distribution of countless bouquets to the fair workers for charity the ballroom was cleared and a dance given. Dr. and Mrs. George W. Urquhart, the latter of whom is president of the board of managers of the home and has striven hard for the success of the undertaking, entertained Mr. and Mrs. James A. Glase, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Geiger, Mr. and Mrs. William Sautter, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Slickles, Mr. and Mrs. David Jester, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Morris, Mrs. Fayette R. Plumb and Miss Gertrude Urquhart in their box.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Stackhouse entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Mayer, Dr. and Mrs. Howard A. Miner, Miss Minnie Hartman and Miss Serena Barnes, of Coatesville, in their box.

There are still other cozy little organizations tucked in out-of-the-way places near the city, which make a specialty of some sport. The Radnor and Pickering Hunts are of these. Another is the Philadelphia Gun Club, and a fourth the Corinthian Yacht Club.

This usual manner in which these small clubs are handled is by installing a steward and his wife, the latter doing the cooking and the former being a sort of general factotum, tending bar, serving dinner, running the vegetable garden and handling the live stock.

There is an amusing story told of the breaking in of a new steward at one of these clubs. He was unfamiliar with the etiquette of the place and was constantly making minor "faux pas" which rather annoyed some of the members. One of his favorite tricks would be to suddenly walk into the parlor without warning and without having been called for. As the room was generally occupied by some couple who had come there because of the cozy exclusiveness of the place and to be "far from the madding crowd," these interruptions, to say the least, jarred.

The matter was taken to the chairman of the House Committee with the facetious suggestion that he provide the man with a whistle or tie a cow bell around his neck. But the chairman rose to the occasion with a master stroke of true Napoleonic genius. He made the offending steward discard his felt slippers, which had been acting as his official mufflers, and provided him with the squeakiest pair of ultra squeaky shoes that could be obtained.

The result was entirely satisfactory to all concerned, and they are now talking of making this entire House Committee man president of the club as a bribe to his servile nature.

MISS HELEN d'AURIA. Miss d'Auria is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. d'Auria. She will make her debut at a dance which will be given by her uncle and aunt, Captain and Mrs. Redgraves, of Baltimore.

NORTH PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Charles Berger, of 1908 North 29th street, will entertain at luncheon and bridge today at her home. The guests will include Mrs. Albert Balts, Mrs. G. C. Seidel, Mrs. William Gowen, Mrs. William G. Ware, Mrs. M. McCauley, Mrs. Louis Weston, Mrs. George Baer, Mrs. Harry Parsons, Mrs. John Bradley, Mrs. James Hollihan, Mrs. Frederic Rollman, Mrs. Franz Schanz, Mrs. William Georgianna, Mrs. E. Gressel, Mrs. George Clamer.

Miss Helen Eyre, of 1421 Girard avenue, will entertain at a theatre party followed by a dinner, Saturday afternoon, when her guests will be Miss Beatrice Smith, Miss Edith Lonsdale, Miss Helen Millard, Miss Addie Lutton, Miss Dorothy Gamble and Miss Eleanor Stone.

NORTHEAST PHILADELPHIA

A delightful affair for the cause of "sweet charity" will be the dance given in the Adelphi this evening, the proceeds of which will bring Christmas cheer to many poor families in Northeast Philadelphia. An interesting feature of the affair will be the exhibition dances which Miss Ines Livingstone and Earl Delane, the well-known dance artists, have kindly consented to give.

The first meeting of a 500 will be held this evening when Miss Elizabeth White, of 2755 Walnut street, will entertain. The club will meet fortnightly at the homes of different members. Those present will be Miss Grace McCool, Miss Anna Maguire, Miss Mary McEvoy and Miss White and Joseph Riley, William De-ween, James Kelly and Horace Spoon.

There is probably no city in the world so well provided with social clubs as Philadelphia. Especially is this true of the quantity and quality of the smaller organizations scattered thickly about the suburbs. I do not refer to the regular country clubs, such as Manheim, Merton, the Philadelphia Country, the Philadelphia Cricket, Delaware River, White-marsh, Huntingdon Valley, and others, but to the tiny associations, some of them affiliated with larger organizations, such as the Lilacs, the Button and the Anchorage situated on the Schuylkill, all of which are supposed to be connected with rowing, but are really used more for the purpose of giving dinners and dances. Then there are others which are frankly eating clubs. The famous old State in Schuylkill, the patriarch of them all and better known as the "Fish House," is one of these. It has the longest consecutive history of any club in the world, its charter dating, if I recollect correctly, from 1728. The Rabbit is another club devoted to the gentle art of cooking, its members, like those of the Fish House, being practically all eligible for Brillat Savarin's Cordon Bleu.

There are still other cozy little organizations tucked in out-of-the-way places near the city, which make a specialty of some sport. The Radnor and Pickering Hunts are of these. Another is the Philadelphia Gun Club, and a fourth the Corinthian Yacht Club.

This usual manner in which these small clubs are handled is by installing a steward and his wife, the latter doing the cooking and the former being a sort of general factotum, tending bar, serving dinner, running the vegetable garden and handling the live stock.

The matter was taken to the chairman of the House Committee with the facetious suggestion that he provide the man with a whistle or tie a cow bell around his neck. But the chairman rose to the occasion with a master stroke of true Napoleonic genius. He made the offending steward discard his felt slippers, which had been acting as his official mufflers, and provided him with the squeakiest pair of ultra squeaky shoes that could be obtained.

The result was entirely satisfactory to all concerned, and they are now talking of making this entire House Committee man president of the club as a bribe to his servile nature.
